A Novel Enterprise—A Colony of Women for the Far West

SEVEN HUNDRED YOUNG WOMEN GOING TO WASHINGTON TERRITORY—EXPERIENCES OF A TERRITORIAL AGENT WITH GOVERNMENT OFFICERS AND OTHERS.

[From the N. Y. Evening Post, Sept. 28.]

Seven hundred young women, thirty or forty families, and twenty young men will sail in this port in the first week of October in the steamship Continental for Washington Territory. The vessel will pass round Cape Horn. The persons on board emigrate to the Pacific coast under the superintendence of Mr. A. S. Mercer, a resident of Washington Territory, a member of the Territorial Council and an authorized agent by appointment of Governor Pickering. We give below a history of the scheme of emigration.

THE EMIGRANTS.

The largest number of young women who accompany the expedition, and whose presence constitutes its principal feature, are from the New England States. Their ages vary from sixteen to twenty five years, a very few are older. They are guaranteed employment when they arrive in Washington Territory, with a sufficient remuneration to make them independent. This is not a matrimonial adventure; it is expressly stipulated that the wages of the girls shall be adequate for their support without recourse to marriage, though there is not the most distant probability that young women who desire to marry will be prevented.

These girls, we are assured, are, in respect to educational and personal qualities, equal to the average of the women in this or any other State; many of them go out as teachers, and others are to engage in any occupation with which they are familiar. The sum they are to receive is four dollars a week in gold. About one third of the whole number will pay twenty five dollars each towards defraying the expenses of their journey. All the others go free.

The few families who emigrate in this company are mechanics, who are much needed on the Pacific coast. About one half of them are shoemakers, the remainder have useful trades. The young men who are of the party have been soldiers, and were in the service from the beginning of the war. Several of them were wounded.

THE BEGINNING OF THE SCHEME.

Mr. Mercer, the founder of this expedition, came to the east two years ago, and on his return to the territory took with him twelve young women, who were guaranteed employment as the members of the present company have been. Nearly all taught school, and received for their services from fifty to eighty dollars a month. They did not become lonesome or tired of the territory, nor have they desired to return. Several of them are now married, and their places as teachers are vacant. The success of this first enterprise encouraged Mr. Mercer to extend his plans so that they would comprise the emigration of a shipload of women. He was duly commissioned by Governor Pickering as an agent of Washington territory, and the Governor also gave him a most flattering letter of recommendation, in which Mr. Mercer's high character and responsibility were fully certified. Mr. Mercer was also provided with letters of introduction to prominent persons in this city and in the eastern States. With these documents he started from the territory in February last, and came directly to New York.

It was Mr. Mercer's intention to see Mr. Lincoln immediately on his arrival here, and to lay the plan of emigration before him; not doubting that the President would at once approve the plan, and aid it by designating a government steamer in which the daughters and widows of soldiers might be taken to Washington territory, to be provided with homes without expense to themselves. Mr. Mercer thought Mr. Lincoln would not only acquiesce in the propriety and justice of this course, but would also give such assistance as would render the scheme almost certain of success.

On the 14th day of April Mr. Mercer arrived in New York. On the next day the news of the assassination of the President was received. Mr. Mercer abandoned his plan.

A NEW PLAN.

He decided, however, to do what he could to encourage emigration overland, and made a journey to Kansas with that view. Subsequently he returned to New York, and devised a plan by which he hoped to take one hundred and fifty young women and one hundred and fifty families to the Pacific coast, on the condition that the passage money of all persons should be paid by themselves but that work should be found for them in the territory at specified wages. He traveled through Massachusetts, distributed circulars embodying his plan, and held many conferences with varying prospects, but without marked success.

THE ORIGINAL SCHEME REVIVED—GOVERNOR ANDREW'S VIEWS.

Mr. Mercer determined to make an effort for the fulfillment of the plan that was first formed. He visited Governor Andrew, of Massachusetts, and asked him to use his influence with the Government to procure a steamer to convey seven hundred daughters of dead soldiers, or war widows, or other respectable and deserving females. Governor Andrew after examining the credentials of Mr. Mercer, entered heartily into his plans; said they were such as to be encouraged, and offered to assist Mr. Mercer by all the means in his power. The Governor added that he had thought much of this subject, and had tried to direct attention to the advantages of the kind of emigration proposed, from Massachusetts and from other States of the East, where there is too large a population of females, to the States and Territories of the West, where the population is too small. Mr. Mercer's proposition was, in brief, that he would himself agree to provide the provisions for the emigrants while on their way to the Pacific, as well as to procure them homes, if the Government would furnish a vessel manned and coaled for the purpose. The Governor gave Mr. Mercer a letter to the Secretary of War, fully approving the object of the emigration, and certifying to the character of Mr. Mercer as a proper person to take charge of the emigrants.

MR. MERCER AND THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

Mr. Mercer went to Washington with his letter, but did not present it to Mr. Stanton. He had heard that that officer was not easily accessible, and anticipated failure, he therefore approached the Secretary of the Navy. Mr. Welles heard him through, and at the close said he could see no objection to the plans, on the contrary, he thought the Government might justly grant the aid desired. He, however, could do nothing, all the vessels over which he had any control were for war purposes, and not for the carriage of passengers. Mr. Stanton, he said, had all the transports, which alone were fitted for the service required. Mr. Welles added that Mr. Mercer might say to Mr. Stanton from him that he thought the persons whom it was proposed to assist to Washington Territory had claims upon the Government that ought to be regarded.

AN INTERVIEW WITH GENERAL GRANT.

But Mr. Mercer did not then go to Mr. Stanton. He saw Colonel Bowers of General Grant's staff, with whom he was already acquainted, and the Colonel consented to help him as much as possible. Mr. Mercer drew up an outline of his scheme, and the paper was put into the hands of General Grant, with such explanations as the Colonel could give. Next morning Mr. Mercer met General Grant, and introduced himself. The General had in his hand the paper Colonel Bowers had given him. He said to Mr. Mercer that he had thought of the matter, and approved it. He felt sure the officers of the Government would embrace every opportunity presented to assist women who had lost their fathers in the service. The object was in all respects praiseworthy. He would see the President.

MR. JOHNSON AND MR. STANTON APPROVE.

On the next day General Grant saw Mr. Johnson. The President gave his approval, and by his direction the matter was referred to the Secretary of War. The Lieutenant General advised with Mr. Stanton, who gave his very cordial assent, but they decided that as the proposition involved something entirely new it should be given into the charge of Major General Howard.

GENERAL HOWARD AND GENERAL GRANT.

According to the understanding with the Secretary of War, the question was to be finally disposed of by General Grant. That officer sent Mr. Mercer to General Howard, with directions to say to him that he (General Grant) was ready to issue any order General Howard might think necessary to carry into effect the proposed emigration. Mr. Mercer then explained his project to General Howard, who thought exceedingly well of it, and who said he would do anything he could in favor of it. Mr. Mercer asked the General to state that fact on paper, as General Grant only awaited his approval. General Howard accepted Mr. Mercer to describe his scheme in writing, and when that was done the General gave the desired recommendation, on which General Grant sent an order to Brigadier General Van Vliet, quartermaster at New York, to assign a steamer for the purpose of carrying to Washington territory the females who might be designated by Mr. Mercer. General Van Vliet, when he received the order, said it was a very proper movement for the government to favor, and that nothing he could do to facilitate it should be wanting. General Van Vliet had many steamers under his control. The arrangement thus concluded was according to the original proposition, by which Mr. Mercer was to provide the food for the emigrants, and the government was to see to it that they were conveyed to their place of destination. Mr. Mercer then proceeded to make arrangements for the voyage.

THE SELECTION OF THE EMIGRANTS.

Repairing again to Massachusetts, Mr. Mercer issued circulars and traveled from place to place in that State and in the States of Connecticut, New Hampshire and Maine. His headquarters remained in New York. He requested that letters on the subject of emigration, and intended for him, should be directed thither, and as he passed to various towns he telegraphed to New York, and they were sent to him every three days. His programme was as follows: He usually spent two or three days in larger towns, and young ladies and their friends were invited to call upon him for the information he desired to give, and for general conversation, by which they could ascertain what chances there might be for them in a new country.

Girls of nearly all classes visited him. They came in their best clothing and sometimes in parties of considerable numbers, consisting of their acquaintances and relatives. Mr. Mercer told them of Washington Territory, its resources, scenery and prospects, described society there, and explained to each applicant, when he had learned what her qualifications were, the circumstances under which she would probably live and support herself after the settlement in the Territory. Some of the girls, on hearing what he had to say, and on considering the distance they must travel to reach Washington Territory, thought it too far, or that they could not be contented or suited in other respects, and declined to go. Others who said they had at first little thought of going, expressed their willingness to take the journey and their readiness to accept the better prospects offered them in the West. Mr. Mercer visited about one hundred towns. The result of his labor was that four hundred girls agreed to join the expedition.

DISCOURAGEMENTS.

Mr. Mercer had not so nearly accomplished his project without meeting with many causes of discouragement. Editors of prominent newspapers to whom he had confided his plans refused to give him any countenance or support, or even to allow him to say through their journals what he intended to do. Some of them were not polite in their answers; they had no time to attend to any such schemes as his. The local newspapers of Massachusetts did not favor him, and some of the people thought him a curious individual, with a curious scheme, they accused him of seeking to carry off girls for the benefit of miserable old bachelors, and they threw their influence against him and all that he did. These individuals ridiculed the women who were willing to go to Washington Territory, and told them they had better not allow themselves to be taken away to be lost among the "Ammugens." This term they applied to the men of Washington Territory, and it was supposed to describe, coarse, vulgar, uncouth persons, who lived like savages, in huts, tents, caves, or in any other places they could find in the woods. But Mr. Mercer prospered, he was known to many persons. The few girls he had taken to Washington Territory had sent word to all their friends that they might trust him implicitly, and that they could not possibly do better than come to the West, of which the writers gave glowing accounts in their letters. Through their influence, directly and indirectly, a very large proportion of the four hundred girls had been induced to get ready for the journey.

GEN. MEIGS DECLINES TO OBEY GRANT'S ORDER—MR. MERCER WITHOUT A VESSEL.

About the 1st of August Mr. Mercer came to this city to make preparations for the departure of his expedition. He saw General Van Vliet, and proposed to have the time fixed for the starting of the vessel which General Grant had ordered for his use. The quartermaster answered that he thought Mr. Mercer could not depend upon any aid from the government. Quartermaster General Meigs had declined to allow the use of a vessel to carry the emigrants. General Grant, that officer said, had no right to issue the order for it.

Mr. Mercer was in a very unpleasant position. He had made contracts with the four hundred girls, and had given each of them a paper, which on presentation to him in this city entitled the holder to a free passage to Washington territory. How to proceed was then a very serious question. The cost of taking the girls in the ordinary manner to the Pacific coast would be three hundred dollars each, ($120,000 in all) a sum of money that Mr. Mercer, though he was comparatively wealthy, did not have at his control.

The agent applied to Governor Andrew, who was surprised and by no means pleased at the sudden change which had occurred in the prospects of the emigration scheme. Mr. Mercer went to Washington, and Governor Andrew followed. Mr. Mercer laid the facts before Colonel Bowers but General Grant was absent on his tour to Canada, and the Colonel could do nothing. The subject was brought to the attention of the Assistant Secretary of War, who, when application was made, was in charge of the office, and an inquiry into the facts for the purpose of learning why General Grant's directions had not been carried out was ordered. Pending the result of this investigation Governor Andrew, saying the case was in good shape, left Mr. Mercer in Washington. After a delay of three weeks no result had been reached and Mr. Mercer went directly to General Meigs.

THE STEAMSHIP CONTINENTAL ASSIGNED TO THE EMIGRANTS—NEW CONDITIONS.

Mr. Mercer's interview with the Quartermaster General was somewhat extended. That officer made no objections to the plan of emigration, but he said the Government could not incur an expense of fifty thousand dollars to carry it into effect. The Department had abandoned the project of sending a vessel to the Pacific, where one was much wanted for the Government service. It appears that one of General Grant's reasons for ordering the steamer originally was to supply this want. General Meigs finally said that he would allow the vessel to go if Mr. Mercer would man, coal and provision her. The latter agreed to the proposal on the ground that he must do so or fail altogether to comply with his engagements. General Meigs made an order accordingly. It was approved in the office of the Secretary of War. Mr. Mercer came to this city with it, and the steamship Continental was designated to make the voyage.

FINAL PREPARATION.

Mr. Mercer is now at the Merchants' Hotel, Courtland street, in this city, where he is concluding his arrangements for the journey. He gave notice about the first instant that four or five hundred girls besides the number for whose conveyance he had put himself under obligation could go with him to the West, but each one who was able was to pay twenty five dollars towards defraying the expenses of the passage. This sum will not cover half the cost of the provisions they will consume. Girls who have not the required sum, go upon agreeing to pay the money when they have earned it and can spare it.

The whole expense of sending the vessel to Washington Territory, to be paid by Mr. Mercer, is stated at from $70,000 to $80,000, of which some thirty thousand dollars will be for coal. The amount he will receive from the girls and from other emigrants will not exceed ten thousand dollars. All Mr. Mercer's means are involved in this scheme. How he will get back the sum does not appear.

The girls will be notified to come to this city as soon as the vessel is ready next week. They will arrive by rail and steamboat from all directions, and will go on board at once. Governor Andrew will make an address to them on the occasion of their departure.

The whole number of emigrants who have up to this time agreed to go, is about seven hundred, six hundred and fifty of whom are women. Negotiations with other persons are in progress and it is considered certain that the number of women will be not less than seven hundred.

WHO IS MR. MERCER?

The following is a copy of a letter that was given to Mr. Mercer previous to his departure from Washington Territory:

TERRITORY OF WASHINGTON, EXECUTIVE OFFICE, OLYMPIA, January, 14, 1865.

"Mr. Mercer will visit the eastern and western States to work in the noble and good cause of aiding women of respectability to better their condition in life, by securing good homes in a new and exceedingly healthy and productive country.

"Entire confidence may be placed in his statements and propositions, and in all his invitations to young women to accompany him to Washington Territory.

"Very respectfully yours, &c., &c., "WILLIAM PICKERING, "Governor of Washington Territory."

New Discoveries in an Old Place

Recent [illegible] of gold and silver bearing quartz [illegible] the head waters of the [illegible] Washington Territory, on the Eastern slope of the Cascade mountains, [illegible] the Columbia river are attracting considerable attention in Puget Sound [illegible]. Gold bearing quartz has also lately been discovered in the region of Lake Chelan, and it is said placers of considerable value are known to exist in Klickitat valley. As long ago as 1860 gold placers were worked on the Wes Natchie with satisfactory results but explorations were never pushed into the mountains to any very great distance. The prevailing mania for seeking gold placers and [illegible] quartz elsewhere has retarded developments in Washington Territory, but the existence of valuable minerals is rendered almost certain in many portions of that unexplored country and in future it will not appear strange to hear of many new discoveries being made within her borders. The conveniences for supplying miners through the vast extent of country north of the Columbia river are not inferior to those afforded for supplying the regions further south, and the advantages of being nearer home together with that of a mild climate, offers an inducement to the enterprising of coming years. The first effort at exploring in Oregon for mineral wealth we think was made in this direction, and it was there that the unfortunate explorer from the Dalles, met his death at the hands of Indians. It was in this direction that in 1850 so many left the Willamette valley to look for gold. But the discovery about Jacksonville and of camps elsewhere, has kept the country north of us from coming prominently before the public.

Still further up the Columbia river veins of quartz, rich in silver, have been found. These ores were discovered near the lakes on the upper Columbia. It is said that no rock from any country can surpass this in richness. The ore is found in very great quantities, and it is expected that by next year great numbers of people will be attracted to that locality. There is every indication that the mineral wealth of the Columbia river region surpasses that of any other large extent of country now known. The prosperity of this great region is but just begun. Our trade thereto is constantly increasing in value. We may now safely regard it as permanent. Whatever doubts may have previously existed upon this score have been removed by the successful operations of the present season. The coming year is one of great promise for the upper country and also for our own State.

Reconstruction.—Late intelligence from the South is not very encouraging in regard to the Presidential plan of reconstruction. Mississippi the State from which so much was hoped and expected, does not take the course which she ought to pursue in consideration of the generous policy of the Government toward her. Her people seem to hope that slavery can be restored even yet. The Legislature declines to ratify the Constitutional Amendment, and the State is taking such a position in relation to the Government as will certainly insure the rejection of her Congressmen the coming winter. The poorer classes of the South do not emancipate themselves from the influence of the aristocracy, as the President hoped they would take occasion to do. The "workingmen" of South Carolina, it is said, nominated Wade Hampton for Governor, and the Union hating traitors of the State elected him. In N. C. the half-rebellious Gov. Holden is too earnest a Union man for many of the people, and they are running an outspoken rebel against him. The slavery question seems even yet to be the issue on which the late rebels base their opposition to the Government and its measures. There is to be a general effort throughout the country to restore the dead institution, and the acrimonious feeling of the past is in danger of being revived. But the Union men of the country are standing firm and in their inflexible determination to sustain the principles the people have fought for, lies the whole hope of the nation.

A "constitutional," pro slavery, semi rebel sheet at Memphis, pronounces the proposition in favor of the collection of specimens of the instruments used for the torture of negroes at the South to [illegible] forever a "mute, yet powerful witness of the horrors of American slavery" as a "Satanic suggestion." Papers of the same class never pronounced the use of such instruments satanic. They doubtless feel the same horrors in looking upon them now, however, that the murderer feels in looking upon the instrument of his crime.

The Immigrant Women.—We publish to-day an article from the New York Post in reference to the immigration of women to Washington Territory, which has been before noticed by us. This article is more full in the details of the plan than anything we have before published. We call attention to it, and hope that such arrangements will be made as that the immigrants find their condition improved by coming to this coast.

Wirtz.—The dispatches this morning say that Wirtz considers it a disgrace to a great nation to put him upon regular army rations. It is to be regretted that some of the same kind of rations which he gave our captive brothers at Andersonville can not be found for him. The insolent and heartless monster deserves treatment precisely similar to that which he accorded to the brave patriots who were once under his brutal power.

General Sherman, the "Democratic" nominee for Secretary of State in New York was one of the original Republicans and never voted a "Democratic" ticket in his life. The Copperheads made a platform expressly for him when he consented to become their candidate.

The Mountaineer says that a day or two ago dense volumes of smoke were again seen issuing from Mount Hood. Wonder if San Francisco is in danger of another vigorous shaking?

The Knoxville Whig says that the vote of that Congressional District stands 12 [illegible] for the Union candidates and 217 for the opposition. Rebels are somewhat less numerous there than formerly.

More Indians Killed.—We have before reported that on the 6th of October the Snakes ran off some mules from Camp Logan. Captain Ingraham, of the First Oregon Infantry at once started in pursuit, with provisions in the haversacks of his men, twenty in number, for three days. He found the mountains plentifully marked with fresh Indian signs and after proceeding sixty miles south from his camp, he gave up the idea of finding the marauders, and returned to camp. On the 18th of the month he again started out with twenty men and on the night of that day made camp twelve miles south of Camp Logan. On the morning of the 19th he sent out a scouting party and they found some forty Indians encamped in a broken rocky place—highly capable of defence. Leaving half of his men with his baggage, he proceeded to the Indian camp where he found them prepared for fight. His men were keen for a fight, and at once charged the Indians who broke in every direction. In a pursuit of six miles eight Indians were killed, and three of the whites were grazed by bullets. Returning to the Indian camp Captain Ingraham destroyed several thousand pounds of beef which the Indians were engaged in jerking when they were discovered. He then renewed the pursuit and after keeping after them for two days longer without further results gave it up and returned to Camp Logan.—Mountaineer.

The monitor Camanche is still at Mare Island nearly ready for service and in condition to be placed in our harbor at six hours notice should there be occasion for it. Every few days the steam is raised upon her to test the working of her engines and machinery and to keep everything in proper condition. Indian Outrage on Snake River—Murder.—A man named Cox, while riding with his wife in a wagon, from Snake river towards Ruby City was murdered at a point on the road spoken of as "Canyon" by some Indians supposed to be Snakes. The murder took place on the 29th of last month. The wife stated that they were attacked by three Indians and a Mexican who was near the place at the time; says that he saw two Indians. There were several teams in sight and close by and from this fact alone was the woman's life saved. A band of about forty Snakes had been seen a short time before in the neighborhood and it is probable that a small detachment from them perpetrated the murder. It is while such scenes as these are being enacted within thirty miles of the Owyhee mines, at the same distance from Fort Boise and on the great est thoroughfare in the mountains that the powers that be are ordering the troops in service in this department to be mustered out. Such outrages are retarding the development of the country to the east of us and are doing so seriously injuring the business of the commercial centres the agricultural districts and in short all who have any connection with or dependence in the mining interests. The reduction of the military force in this department should be made the subject of an energetic remonstrance on the part of the civil authorities of the State.

Since writing the above we learn by parties who came down the river last night that after Mr Cox was shot his wife whipped up the team and overtook two teams the Indians pursuing. The teamsters had barely time to cut loose the teams from their wagons when the Indians came upon them. It was then a race for life to the crossing of Snake river. The Indians plundered the abandoned wagons of everything which they could carry off.—Mountaineer.

Message of Governor Brownlow.—Governor Brownlow delivered his annual message to the General Assembly of Tennessee October 2d. He congratulated them on witnessing the termination of the rebellion the signal triumph of our country and independence. A new subject for the Legislature now developed in which the wishes of the constituents should be consulted for the honest people are always right. Amendments and additions to the franchise law are recommended but I am by no means an advocate of its repeal nor do the loyal people of the State wish any such sweeping change. The restoration of the civil law has worked well and prosperity is promised in every section. Bad rebels should be treated with severity in proportion to their offense. The man with five or ten years disfranchisement and the harlots with neither mercy nor forbearance. Immigration should be fostered and encouraged and a commissioner stationed at the east to secure a more [illegible] foreign emigration of skilled labor. He does not think that white and colored people can live together politically and socially as equals and advocates the setting apart some portion of the National territory best adapted for a nation of freedmen. The testimony of negroes is recommended to be taken in all the courts on the same basis as that of white persons. President Johnson's reconstruction policy is strongly endorsed as the only hope of the country.

Good Fortune.—Mr. R. H. [illegible], who hitched out Jerry Douglas last summer to go to the Blackfoot mines has just received word from Mr. Douglas that he is occupying a claim in Carvin Gulch at the head of [illegible] Gulch from which he has taken out forty thousand dollars. He sends Mr. Johns two thousand dollars and writes him that there is eighteen thousand more together with an equal interest in the claim awaiting him on his arrival in the mines. Mr. J. [illegible] start for the mines in a few days and all acquainted with him will congratulate him upon his turning of fortune. Jerry Douglas must be a model of gratitude and honesty.—Walla Walla Statesman.

[illegible]—The Idaho Statesman of October 28th says that there were fifty eight horses and mules stolen from Camp [illegible] Valley by the Snakes a few days before. All of them but twenty seven head were recovered. The Indians crossed the Owyhee and took up a long canyon where pursuit was abandoned by the party of fourteen men that had gone after them.

Freedmen and Negro Suffrage

EDITOR OREGONIAN:

The burden of American politics, it would seem, must continue for many years to be "the negro." The great rebellion was thought to be a difficult problem, but the solution that has rested on the ... of ... is ... the ... of that man ... There is one ... condition ... and ... simple enough ... the war the negro ... from the ... a hateful ... now all ... have ... as to treat him as a man ... make him a citizen ... to ... he will take care of himself. Others say, remove him from the country. ... the freedmen in some fertile spot and leave them to work out their destiny. Others would have them left free to go or stay, to help themselves by honest labor or to starve, just as they shall individually choose, a limiting them to political citizenship only when they have qualified themselves by the accumulation of a certain amount of property and the attainment of a certain ... education. Some would have the main stream of charitable effort in the community to run toward the freedmen and would treat them as the creditors of the white race, while there think that emancipation alone is enough for and ... and if he wants education, culture, ... privileges, he should earn them and take thankfully whatever, but little, ... that the superior race may choose at any time to give him.

In the midst of this conflict of opinion ... for ... to talk up on the true ... and the best to be carried into practice, for all are in part correct and each have the foundation in the facts that exist. I can but regard it as unfortunate that this question should be so easily mixed up with party politics. For though it may be ... that the negro protected ... well governed so that he may appreciate and enjoy the real blessings of civil liberty, it is for him of merely secondary importance whether or not he have any direct part in the business of governing. In other words, it is of the greatest consequence to the negro that the laws under which he lives should operate beneficially upon all his highest interests and if they do so it is of very little consequence to him who shall make those laws. The question of negro suffrage is one that in ... the freedmen ... and is secondary to that of humanity and benevolence.

The negroes are not all alike or equal in point of character or capacity. There are a few that are intelligent and even educated, that are in ... self reliant and need but be let alone in order to make useful men ... But of the four millions that were in the slave States at the beginning of the war, it is safe to say that but a few thousand were of his description. It may be that those ought to be allowed to vote. They certainly should if the white man's laws are so framed as to be destructive of their well being and a hindrance to their improvement and progress as individuals. It is a waste and worse than a waste of time to argue with those who claim that the liberties of the people would not be as safe in the hands of such colored men as those above named, in common with white men, as in the hands of the lazy, idle, ignorant and vicious whites who are found at almost every poll in the land—who cannot read and will not work, whose drink is abominable whisky, and whose food is stolen bread, and whose only title to vote is the fact that their skin is white and that they have never been duly convicted of felony. But as a general thing this class of negroes are not anxious to vote, being satisfied with the life, liberty, and the right to pursue happiness, which they have already guaranteed by the white man's laws in nearly all the old free States.

The great majority of the freedmen are of a very low grade of humanity—brutalized by a long and most debasing servitude, ignorant in the extreme, and often vicious as savages, superstitious and even heathenish they are. In their present condition not only unable to act the part of men but actually incapable of taking care of themselves. They are less subjects for equal privileges than objects of pity and of anxious solicitude. How to fill their mouths with honest bread and cover their nakedness, and keep them from immediately falling into a deeper degradation, is the practical question, and the first question that ought to be settled. It is no answer to this to say "put ballots in their hands," unless it be made to appear that ballots will produce homes and clothing and food and self respect and self reliance, and this cannot be shown till it be made to appear why ballots do not produce these results with thousands of white heathen that have voted in every State in the Union for these last three generations.

In short, let the negro be saved and practically restored to manhood before we proceed to demand his political apotheosis.

Never had a nobler work been opened so near at home for the exercise of true charity and practical beneficence as this of taking care of and instructing the poor plantation negro how to be a man. It may justly claim the attention and practical aid of every man and woman of whatever sect or party, who has any concern for humanity; but as to negro suffrage, would it not be wiser and more truly conducive to the negro's well being, to suspend agitation till it be clearly seen what the white men, who immediately exercise legislative power over the freedmen, what the late masters and statesmen of the Southern States shall do or refuse to do in the premises? Will not the politicians mar the work of the philanthropist? and will not the true philanthropist divest himself of half his armor by allowing his cause to be cast into the political arena.

REPUBLICAN.

DUTY BEFORE SELF.—Following is an extract from a letter of the late Sir Augustus Frazer, Royal Artillery, on the occasion of the Duke of Wellington giving the command of that arm to the late Sir Alexander Dickson, his junior officer over his head, in the Peninsula: "I shall get on very well with Dickson: he was second to me in the South American expedition and then obeyed my orders with the implicit readiness which I shall now transfer to his. He is a man of great abilities and quickness, and without fear of any one." Nothing can be finer than the unselfish spirit and devotion to duty here shown, and which proves how worthy Frazer was to be one of the lieutenants of that great commander, whose own motto invariably was "Duty before everything."

In Massachusetts a law has just been passed forbidding licensing of any exhibition intended or calculated to bring any person into contempt on account of his color. The intent of this law is to suppress minstrel performances.

It is stated that at the temperance convention at Saratoga that thirteen hundred rich men's daughters in New York, are applicants for admission to the asylum as inebriates at Binghampton.

The Tribune says it suits the purposes of the State Rights Democracy to represent the rebellion as an episode in our history and its suppression, with reference to the future, as of no more importance than the suppression of a Dead Rabbit Riot.

He that loves himself has only one joy; he that loves his neighbors has many.

No Time Like the Old Time

There is no time like the old time, when you and I were young,
When the buds of April blossomed, and the birds of spring-time sung.
The garden's brightest glories by summer suns are nursed,
But oh, the sweet, sweet violets, the flowers that opened first!

There is no place like the old place, where you and I were born,
Where we lifted first our eyelids on the splendors of the morn;
From the milk-white breast that warmed us, from the clinging arms that bore,
Where the dear eyes glistened o'er us that will look on us no more!

There is no friend like the old friend who has shared our morning days,
No greeting like his welcome, no homage like his praise;
Fame is the scentless sunflower, with gaudy crown of gold;
But Friendship is the breathing rose, with sweets in every fold.

There is no love like the old love that we courted in our pride;
Though our leaves are falling, falling, and we're fading side by side,
There are blossoms all around us with the colors of our dawn,
And we live in borrowed sunshine when the light of day is gone.

There are no times like the old times—they shall never be forgot!
There is no place like the old place—keep green the dear old spot!
There are no friends like our old friends,—may Heaven prolong their lives!
There are no loves like our old loves—God bless our loving wives!

Presentation at the White-House—Seth Kinman presents his Renowned Bear-Skin Chair to the President

For fear our readers may not have seen a description of the curious and extraordinary chair recently manufactured in Pennsylvania from the skins of four grizzly bears which at various times within the past two or three years have been killed in the wilds of California by the famous hunter and trapper, Seth Kinman, we reproduce that portion of a cotemporary's notice bearing upon the construction and mechanism of this chair:

Mr. Kinman has now constructed a chair that surpasses all his previous efforts. It is made of two grizzly bears, captured by himself. But we almost despair of giving anything like an intelligent description of the article. Suffice it to say that the four legs with the feet and claws in perfection are those of a huge grizzly bear, while the arms are the arms and paws of another grizzly, the back and sides are also ornamented with immense claws. The seat is soft and exceedingly comfortable, but the great "feature" of the institution" is, that by touching a cord, the head of a monster grizzly bear, with distended jaws, will dart in front from under the seat, snapping and gnashing its teeth as natural as life. It is wonderful in design, wonderful in execution and a worthy souvenir from the great hunter of the Rocky Mountains to the Chief Magistrate of the Nation.

Upon the arrival of the chair from its place of manufacture to this city it was conveyed "under guard" to one of the committee rooms at the Capitol where only a privileged few, consisting of "officials" and a small number of ladies, were permitted to gaze upon the wonderful work of industry and skill. After the lapse of several days it was carried to Brady's well known gallery and there photographed. On yesterday, through the intervention of the Hon. K. V. Whaley, member of Congress from West Virginia, the President agreed to set apart any hour after four o'clock P. M. for its reception. Accordingly a few minutes after this hour the chair was carefully placed in a wagon, and, accompanied by Kinman, was conveyed to the White House. A little before five the presentation party were met by the doorkeeper and the chair ordered to be brought within the first large entrance room of the mansion. Only a few were admitted and the eager crowd which had collected on the outside were only allowed to gratify their curiosity by peering through the windows.

After a short delay a messenger came running down the stairway and announced that his Excellency was ready and waiting. At this stage the members of the press were kindly invited to ascend, and they, together with the remainder of the party, following on the heels of the Kinman, soon found themselves on the threshold of the Presidential sanctum. The door of the room had been thrown open, and, without introduction or formal ceremony, the hardy pioneer of the wild Pacific slope, the conqueror of wild beasts and wild men, grasped by the hand the honored President of an all powerful Republic. Kinman was evidently no stranger to the President, who received him in a most cordial manner.

Leaning upon his rifle, and as calm as though he had been conversing with a prairie companion, he stated to the President that recently he had been up in Pennsylvania constructing a chair from the skins of several "grizzlies" which he had killed with his own rifle, and which he desired to present to him. That in offering it as a token of respect both to his person and office, he desired to say that in his opinion the "President of these United States was the biggest man in the world."

The President was much gratified at this emphatic compliment, and, in returning thanks said he thought he knew how to appreciate both it and the chair.

The President here insisted that "Seth" should sit in the chair, after which he sat in the chair, praising highly its beauty and comfortable qualities. The "bear-killer," in the meanwhile had become so much at ease in his intercourse with the President that he descanted and chatted upon the prominent points of his gift with perfect nonchalance. This originated, however, from no want of respect to his Excellency, but rather from a buoyancy of animal spirits and a general good nature, which has won for Kinman a host of friends wherever he is known.

After displaying all the parts and points of his wonderful chair, calling attention to the formidable claws that clustered on its sides, the natural feet of the animals on which it rested, the old hunter paused. It was plain however that something remained to be told, something startling to be shown, and the Rocky Mountain speaker had not pronounced his peroration. Carefully unloosing the cords which concealed the huge head, he suddenly darted it, snapping and gnashing its teeth, close to the President's knees, which was received by the crowd with uproarious laughter and heartily enjoyed by the President himself.

The grown children of His Excellency, several in number, now came in, and were loud in their demands to be shown again this wonderful feature of the chair. No one seemed to enjoy their delight and fun more than the President, whose care-worn face was lighted up with benignant smiles, and whose stern nature seemed to have relaxed and grown cheerful over the pleasing incident. The crowd of their own accord now withdrew, leaving Kinman almost alone with the President. At last, however, upon suggesting to His Excellency that he should keep the head of the "grizzly" well protruded in order to frighten off the office-seekers and unrepentant rebels who besiege his mansion, and receiving a warm invitation to visit the White House at his pleasure, the worthy old hunter withdrew, well pleased at his reception and success.—Washington Chronicle, Sept. 9.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

WEEKLY REVIEW

PORTLAND, November 1d, 1865.

During the week about to close there has been a perceptible falling off in the brisk business of the two months preceding, in the article of flour, but there has been a fair business transacted in other branches of trade. The fall season may now be considered about to close, and large transactions are uncertain for the winter, notwithstanding stocks generally are pretty full, except in some few articles. The stock of [illegible] shipments to arrive [illegible] will keep it fully up to the standard [illegible].

There has been another effort made [illegible] the trade of Montana [illegible] merchants and moneyed men of this city, seeing the importance of the movement, and not wishing to let so favorable an opportunity pass without proper measures for its [illegible], have taken a more active part in conjunction with those who were the first projectors of the enterprise, and are today working energetically for the ultimate success of the movement. Money [illegible] subscribed, and the road [illegible] from the head of Lake d'Orielle Lake to Hell Gate will only directly be constructed. This will give [illegible] route to the heart of the valuable mining [illegible] the eastern base of the Rocky Mountains and the Missouri river.

There are parties in this city to whom Capt. John Mullan made [illegible] of [illegible] years since before the recovery of gold in the [illegible] Lake d'Oreille Lake for the purpose of forming [illegible] through [illegible] intercontinental [illegible] to [illegible]. Lard [illegible] of Capt. Mullan's Hand Book of Oregon, Washington and Idaho, published in 1865, we find the following paragraph concerning the same project now entertained by the enterprising persons who are making efforts to put the route into use.

My idea has always been that steam on the Clark's Fork [illegible] Lake and 20 miles up the Clark's Fork would [illegible] a point where a cheap wagon road could be [illegible] to the Hell Gate and that for all purposes [illegible] mails and for general purposes that in time this would be done.

Captain Mullan, [illegible] was the builder of the wagon road from Walla Walla to Fort Benton. He [illegible] travel [illegible] months, would we have before shown [illegible] large amount of money. The last Congress made an appropriation of $40,000 for the completion of a road from Butter Root Valley to the western side of the Coeur d'Alene mountains. Since then a road has been extended west by the mouth of the Jocko river and being [illegible] the only practical route [illegible] this [illegible] the [illegible] importance of this route is becoming [illegible] than they [illegible] the [illegible] would [illegible] the [illegible] long [illegible] they have [illegible] everything [illegible].

Domestic Produce Market.

PORTLAND, November 3, 1865.

A continued increase in the receipts of Butter and Lard have caused a decrease in the price of those articles. Butter [illegible] and sales at 35 to 40c in brine.

Grain is higher. Wheat is now jobbing at $2 [illegible] $1 10 ℔ bushel and is in fair demand. The crop has become more affected from rains than was supposed, especially in sections where the patent headers were used in its harvest. This climate is not dry enough to admit of the successful working of headers. The grain stands too long, becomes too ripe, and is consequently too easily damaged. We are informed that in almost every case where headers have been used, the grain is injured.

The new mill of Mr. Vaughn, in this city, will commence flouring in a short time, when there will be more demand here for wheat. At present, buyers are offering the subjoined quotations. None is purchased for shipment, and the California Markets rule about the same as heretofore. Oats are in better query, the ruling prices offered being 50@60c ℔ bushel.

During the week we observe a large shipment of California dried fruit thrown upon the market, from the Briggs' orchard near Marysville. Jobbers hold the varieties as follows: Peaches and pears 16 cents; apples 11 cents per pound. Our own farmers will do well to give this matter that attention it deserves. The only dried fruit of note from home orchards placed upon the market that has come to our knowledge is a consignment of plums from the Summit farm of Mr S. Miller in Clackamas county, consisting of some excellent varieties, which command 20 cents per pound. Mr. Miller has taken a step in the right direction—his kilns, built the past season, have more than returned him the original cost, in profits of a comparatively branch of industry. With our thousands of bushels of fruit lying wasting we should not certainly permit importation to the State, but should be prepared to export.

Eggs are still scarce and advancing.

Weekly Retail Family Market.

FRIDAY November 3d 1865.

The retail market presents no new features, and changes are unadvised. A good quality of lard may now be obtained but prices are still regarded high. Butter and eggs are advancing in consequence upon a demand in excess of supply. Of poultry and game there is a much better supply but not enough to admit of a reduction of quotations. Vegetables are without material change and all descriptions are well represented. Families are now preparing for winter, and some inquiry for potatoes is noted.
